ANCIENT ELEPHANT

Your leather skin is a crumpled paper bag;
sun-shriveled, mud-caked.
Your foot plods and sways
on a tree trunk leg;
the ground trembled in fear;
and you never forget.

Old, blind elephant,
your eyes are like pearl drops.
Opal colours, swish and wash together.
Your window to the world
is almost shut
but you never forget.

10

Wise old creature;
gentle giant;
if only I could learn
your wisdom
and hear the beat of jungle secrets
that you never forget...

15

20

Adapted from Sheryl Perrson

61. In this poem, the elephant's skin is compared to _____.

 - (3) wants to find out where the elephant gathers each day
 - (4) thinks the elephant has much knowledge and wisdom of the jungle ()

Section H: Comprehension Open-ended (5 x 2 marks)

Read the passage carefully and answer the questions that follow.

'Come on!' yelled Mum, 'Your tea is ready.'

I was not interested in tea. I was not interested in anything except this fantastic remote control. It seemed to be able to make animals and insects freeze or go fast forward. I looked through the kitchen door at Dad. He had already started eating. Long pieces of spaghetti dangled from his mouth. He was chewing and sucking at the same time. 5

Now do not get me wrong. I love Dad. I always have. He is a terrific person. However, one thing that he did really irritated me. It was the way he ate spaghetti. He sort of made slurping noises and the meat sauce gathered around his lips as he sucked used to get on my nerves. I believed that was why I did what I did. I knew it was a weak excuse. I shivered. Then I pointed the control at him and hit the 'pause' button. 10

Dad stopped eating. He turned rock solid and just sat there with the fork halfway up to his lips. His mouth was wide open. His eyes stared. The spaghetti hung from his fork like worms of concrete. He did not blink. He did not move. He was as stiff as a tree trunk. 15

Mum looked at him and laughed. 'Good one,' she said, 'You'd do anything for a laugh, Arthur.'

Dad did not move.

'Okay,' said Mum, 'That's enough. You're setting a bad example for Matthew by fooling around with your food like that.' 20

My frozen father never so much as moved an eyeball! Mum gave him a friendly push on the shoulder and he started to topple. Over he went. He looked just like a statue that had been pushed off its mount. Crash! He lay on the ground. His hand still halfway up to his mouth. The solid spaghetti hung in the same position. Only now it stretched out sideways pointing at his toes. 25

Mum gave a little scream and rushed over to him. Quick as a flash, I pointed the remote control at him and pressed 'forward'. The spaghetti dangled downwards. Dad sat up and rubbed his head. 'What happened?' he said.

'You had a little turn,' said Mum in a worried voice, 'You had better go straight down to the hospital and have a check-up. I'll get the car. Matthew, you stay here and finish your tea. We won't be long.' 30

I was going to tell them about the remote control but something made me stop. I had a thought. If I told them about it, they would take it off me. It was the last I would see of it for sure.

Answer in complete sentences.

66. Why did Matthew think that the remote control was fantastic?

67. Why was Matthew annoyed with his father?

68. Write down the sentence that tells you that Matthew does not have a good reason to use the remote control.

69. Why was Mum not worried when Dad first became frozen while eating spaghetti?

70. Write down the word from the passage which has a similar meaning to:

(a) hung loosely : _____

(b) fall over : _____
